Internationalist newspapers and propagandists are now busy in a campaign seeking to get the president to call an extra session of the senate to consider the world court protocol after the regular session of congress adjourns March 4. The fact that the senate in extra session need not confine itself to international relations and might easily have a disturbing influence on the business situation at home counts not at all with these internationalists who have their feet in America and their hearts in Europe.

One of the favorite arguments used for the calling of an extra session is that if the consideration of the Root protocol is postponed until next November the 1932 election and its preliminary campaign will be so close at hand that the world court question will "get into politics." The Baltimore Sun sums up this argument of the internationalists by saying: "To wait for the full session is to risk plunging of this whole subject into the turmoil of pre-1932 partisan politics certain to be in full cry at that time."

The internationalists have good reason to want to avoid any nationwide discussion of the question whether the Root agreement, so-called, is an effectual substitute for the reservations attached by the senate to the world court reservation and rejected in Europe. In each and every instance where the question of entangling commitments has been put up to the American people the internationalists have been decisively beaten. They will be beaten again unless they can get the matter settled before it gets too much public debate.

The senate passed the world court resolution with reservations safeguarding the rights and interests of the United States. European nations rejected these reservations and with the help of Elihu Root European diplomats cooked up another protocol. They say this is "just as good" as the senate reservations, but fail to explain if this is true, why they didn't accept the reservations. The internationalists do not want to have to make too many explanations in the coming campaign and therefore feel that the quicker they can put it over the better. Nobody is in a hurry but the professional internationalists and their newspaper support in America.

Getting back to the depression rumor, the chairman of the house committee on banking and currency thinks that hard times are largely due to the financial policies of the federal reserve in dealing with foreign countries.

He says it was the original purpose to have America pay virtually all of the German indemnity by buying the reparation bonds which, he further adds, Germany was not morally or legally bound to pay.

This was the plan cleverly woven into the Versailles treaty, says the congressman, and he deplores the fact that our government opened the doors to the sale of even a limited number of these bonds to the American people.

The chairman makes the positive assertion that this policy has been supported and carried on by the international bankers and their agents and that by financial control of newspapers and magazines they have succeeded in misleading public opinion. Some day perhaps one of our senate committees will make a thorough investigation and tell us all about it.

Advertise, Says
U. C. Lecturer

San Francisco, Jan. 13—Newspaper advertising is offering more than it ever has, both to the advertiser and to the consuming public. That is the belief expressed by Theodore Watson, University of California lecturer for the extension division in the economic department.

"The newspaper has become an intimate widely read factor in household conduct and the manufacturer or seller who fails to use it to make known his product is making a mistake," Watson avers. The lecturer also states that the consuming public has come to rely more and more upon newspaper advertising for information concerning both the necessities and luxuries of life.

Watson will start a series of lectures on advertising in conjunction with the opening of classes in economics, accounting, principles of investment, the stock exchange and real estate law this week at the extension building, 540 Powell street.

GET YOUR 1930
LICENSE PLATES
BEFORE THE 15TH

Sacramento, Jan. 13—It will be unlawful to drive with 1930 license plates after Thursday unless the driver has filed an application for new plates.

This final word of warning was issued today to motorists by the division of motor vehicles. The person who drives and cannot produce evidence that he has filed an application is liable to arrest.

Until Feb. 1, plates for passenger cars may be obtained at the regular fee of $3. After that date, however, the penalty provided by law for delinquents is in force and the applicant will be required to pay double.

The division states there is still a large number of motorists who have not yet applied and preparations have been made to handle the last minute rush.

Plates may be secured in Campbell through Ralph H. Hyde at the water company's office at Campbell and Central avenues.

Campbell Has
Ford Agency

Recent renovations at the Service garage, operated by Messrs Dunlap and Smily, aroused considerable curiosity 'round about the village. The boys did a very nice job, and although Mr. Dunlap says they are not yet finished with the improvements they have provided for their patrons a much lighter, cleaner and more commodious garage.

"And I'll tell you why"—last week the firm blossomed out with a Ford agency. Cabinets for parts arrived the previous week and Wednesday several new cars were on display. Among the first to purchase new cars from the local dealers were Steve Merrill, who has a nifty coupe, and a Mr. Green, who bought a two-door sedan.

All equipment for the rapid servicing of Ford cars will be installed as soon as possible, with Walter Smily in charge of the mechanical department.

Mr. Dunlap will confine his activities to the sales end of the agency, and will also continue to look after their many radio customers. He made a trip to San Francisco today to get another new car.

The local men are co-operating in the Ford show which is on at the roller rink on the Alameda, open from 10 a. m. to 10 p. m. daily until Saturday, and they invite you to attend. On the floor are most of the color schemes and body styles now being produced by the Ford company, and in addition there is a "talkie" film that takes you through a Ford factory. It's free.

MINNESOTANS TO
MIDWINTER PICNIC
SATURDAY NIGHT

The annual midwinter meeting of the Minnesota State society will be held in the Chamber of Commerce building in San Jose Saturday evening, Jan. 17, beginning with a picnic supper at 6:15. All former Minnesotans are invited. Bring your own dishes, silver and well-filled baskets. Coffee and ice cream will be served by the society. A social hour and a brief program will follow the supper.

to be Mary Lanphear, Hedegard and Harry Smith, who will report at the annual election next regular meeting.

Friday evening at 6:30 o'clock about 135 people sat down to the annual Chamber of Commerce booster dinner in the grammar school cafeteria. Following a dinner which consisted of fried chicken and trimmings, prepared by the ladies Auxiliary of the Orchard City Grange and served by the Campfire Girls, President T. A. Cutting introduced the speakers of the evening, R. W. Pederson of Sunnyvale and J. W. Thomas, navy aerographer.

Mr. Pederson spoke of the effect the Sunnyvale dirigible base might have on local economic conditions, getting a big hand from his hearers. Mr. Thomas told of prevailing weather conditions at the site of the future naval air base. According to his observations there is no more ideal location anywhere. He said that the greatest danger in handling the big ships lay in maneuvering them in and out of their hangars, and that the ground speed of the wind at Sunnyvale is such that these maneuvers can be accomplished at all times without danger of injury to the craft. Mr. Thomas predicted that the establishment of a base on this site will attract thousands of tourists annually, and as tourists are a good part of California's life blood this forecast was met with loud cheers. This interesting discussion was altogether too brief, but time was limited.

Stephen Merrill favored with two solos, "Danny Boy" and "Out of the Dusk." They were received with great enthusiasm.

Other speakers were Wendell Thomas, president of the County Consolidated Chambers of Commerce, who gave a brief history of the activities of that organization. William J. Emig, Santa Clara county's new sheriff assured the Campbell people that he will run the office to the best of his ability, and remarked on the deplorable conditions prevailing at the county jail. The new sheriff invited a committee from the local Chamber of Commerce to come in and look over the situation with the end in view of co-operating in the quest for a new jail. Rev. A. S. Buell spoke in behalf of the churches and the Kiwanis club, and Supervisor Joe McKinnon said hello to his Campbell friends, although he had asked to be excused from the list of speakers.

Mrs. J. W. Knowles, speaking for the high school P. T. A., urged immediate action on a new high school plant. Pointing to the present low price of building materials and labor, Mrs. Knowles said that a bond issue now, with immediate construction, would permit taxpayers to take advantage of present low prices, and that in all probability the bonds would be retired in times of greater prosperity. Her remarks were met with considerable applause.

STILL TIME TO GET
TICKETS FOR THE
H. S. SENIOR PLAY

There are still tickets to be had for the Campbell hi senior play, "Adam and Eva," which will be staged at the grammar school auditorium this Friday night, Jan. 16, beginning at 8 o'clock.

The cast has been hard at work for many weeks, and those who have witnessed rehearsals report that all is in readiness for the big night. Miss Jean McKinley, public speaking teacher, has coached the young players to the best of her considerable ability, and the story they are using this year is humorously refreshing.

If you have not already secured your tickets you are urged to do so at once. Get them from any senior of the high school; if no one calls on you, call up the school and ask them to send a ticket seller to your home. Campbell has always supported the high school affairs, and this year more than ever before the turnout should fill the auditorium to capacity.

That the New York state boxing commission, which has served its empty threats on a score or more champions, continues to suffer from an exaggerated notion of importance is only too clearly demonstrated in the ultimatum lately hurled at Max Schmelling, the greatest title-holding bust of all time, and the scornful pooh-pooh with which he answered it.

You recall, perhaps, that Schmelling was given the Tammany championship appointment last year in his fight with Jack Sharkey when the loquacious Lith slapped him below the equator. Throughout the brief course of the bout, Sharkey had been nozzling in a generous quantity of dubious socks, though probably from force of habit, since there was really no necessity, and so finally, after one especially obvious breach of cauliflower etiquette, Schmelling was declared master-of-mits, the pair were dismissed, and the faithful left to ponder over another bamboozlement.

The commission, at this time, exacted an agreement from the German Cruller to defend his title in New York this year against a candidate which they would name. When Sharkey was proposed, Schmelling immediately tried to duck out, no doubt remembering the former pasting and the nasty tactics of the gob. Then came the ultimatum, so-called, which demanded the Schmelling either fight Sharkey or forfeit his title, and the subsequent pooh-pooh. Tammany revoked the title, Schmelling remained champion, at least in the public eye, and the commission stung itself.

There are two substantial reasons why Schmelling could not afford to fight in New York despite the revocation of his title. In the first place, the prize fight public, which was embezzled to the extent of more than half a million, will not turn out to watch the low comedy deliberations of the same pair who fleeced them previously—at least, not in wholesale proportions, even considering the gullibility of the boxing faithful. Secondly, the New York commission has suspended the fouling penalty, which possibly accounts for Sharkey's promiscuity in the last engagement, thus legalizing a pugilistic device that Mr. Sharkey had cultivated well in advance of its authorization. This invitation to foul is not looked upon with any favor by Schmelling as he does not hanker after the agony of another low swat, even from the fists of a master in the art. Can't blame him, either.

The Teuton will probably end by signing with Nate Lewis or Damon Runyon to meet Stribling in Chicago, although the Garden is making a frenzied effort to promote a Stribling-Sharkey fight for New York. Runyon, representative of the annual Hearst milk fund show, is confident of signing Schmelling with Stribling and admits that he will have a very important announcement to make on the subject in a few days.

The U. C. L. A. basketball team assumed a commanding lead in the Pacific coast conference championship race last week-end by downing the Stanford quintet twice, 32-23 and 28-26. The Redshirts finished strong in both contests, but were unable to overcome big advantages the southerners acquired early in each game.

Jack Dempsey, refereeing a wrestling bout in Texas, proved conclusively that he is in the pink of condition. Billy Edwards, one of the wrestlers, had been pawing Jack's new clothes every time he stepped in to separate the combatants. Dempsey's wrath mounted each time, and finally he stuck a left in the wrestler's pit, crossed with a right to the chin, and laid him on the resin cold as a clam. The audience of 10,000 spectators went wild, rushing to the ring for souvenirs of Jack's clothing. He had been warned of difficulties other arbiters had encountered there, but paid no heed.

Ten Italian Planes Make Flight From Africa to Brazil at Cost of Five Lives—Doings in Congress—Unemployment Decreasing.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

Gen. Balbo

ITALY'S "air armada" conquered the Atlantic ocean, but at the expense of five lives. Of the fourteen big seaplanes that started from Rome for Brazil, ten made the flight across the sea successfully. Two crashed immediately after the take-off at Bolama, in Portuguese Guinea; one man was killed in the fall of the first, and the entire crew of four perished when the second fell and burst into flames. The two replacement planes that were in the squadron were ordered into flight after these mishaps, and both of them were forced down by mechanical trouble not far from the Brazilian island of Fernando de Noronha. Their crews were picked up by Italian destroyers that were patrolling the route.

Of the ten planes that got across safely, the first to land at Natal, Brazil, was the one piloted by Gen. Italo Balbo, Italian air minister, who commanded the armada. The second was piloted by Colonel Maddalena, holder of the world's distance and endurance records. General Balbo was highly elated by the success of the flight, saying it was greater than he had expected, despite the misfortunes at Bolama. The aviators were given a great welcome at Natal, and later in the week, when they flew on to Rio de Janeiro, were the recipients of a wonderful ovation in that capital city. The planes are all to be sold to the Brazilian government, but may first be flown to Buenos Aires and back. They are of the Savoia-Marchetti "55" type adopted as bombing planes by the Italian navy and on the transatlantic flight each carried four men and radio sets.

NEARLY seven months of intensive and careful work by detectives and newspaper men has resulted in the arrest of the man who is declared to be the murderer of Alfred Lingle, a reporter for the Chicago Tribune. The law authorities assert that mysterious crime that excited the entire country is now cleared up. The accused man is Leo Brothers, a gunman of St. Louis, where he has a long police record. He was quietly arrested in Chicago on December 21, but the capture was kept secret while the officials completed their investigation.

Brothers, who in Chicago went under the name of Louis V. Bader, answers the description of Lingle's assassin and is said to have been positively identified by witnesses to the murder. The officials declare he was hired to slay Lingle, but refused for the present to tell who hired him or to name the witnesses who identified him. Neither would they reveal any of the proof they say they have of his guilt.

CONGRESS no sooner resumed its session after the holidays than the opponents of the administration resumed their troublesome tactics. They centered for the time being largely about the appropriation for drought relief.

Sen. Caraway

The house passed the bill carrying $45,000,000 for the purpose of loans to farmers for food. Senator Caraway of Arkansas sponsored this move. He declared he knew there was extreme suffering in the country districts of his state, and his assertions were strengthened by the reports that hundreds of farmers had rioted for food at England, Ark., and were appeased to some extent by gifts of food from the Red Cross.

John Barton Payne, head of the Red Cross, in testimony before the committee on appropriations, denied there was a riot at England and said that 500 persons had been quietly fed after about forty men came in with some excitement and demanded food.

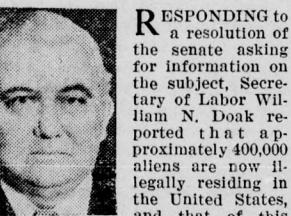

The administration does not think congressional appropriations for food are necessary or wise. The radicals and perhaps some other members of congress more than intimate that President Hoover and his advisers are cold blooded and heartless in this matter.

MOST impressive of the gubernatorial inaugurations of the week were those in Madison, Wis., and in Sacramento, Calif. In the former, Philip Fox La Follette, standing where stood his father, Robert M. La Follette, 30 years ago, took the oath as chief executive of the state that has been so faithful to his family. The ceremony was witnessed by Philip's brother, Senator Robert La Follette, other members of the family, Senator Blaine many many Republican leaders from all parts of the state. The rotunda of the state capitol was gay with flags and flowers, and the bands of the One Hundred Fifth cavalry and the Undahy high school played "On Wisconsin" and "America."

It took three days of pageantry and carnival to put "Sunny Jim" Rolph in the governor's chair in California. Orchestras and bands from all over the state, prairie schooners and stage coaches, military organizations, civic bodies, delegations of movie actors and innumerable native sons and daughters participated in the doings, which culminated in a grand inaugural ball.

Other governors inducted into office during the week included C. Ben Ross of Idaho, Fred B. Balzar of Nevada, Frank C. Emerson of Wyoming, Warren E. Green of South Dakota, and George W. P. Hunt of Arizona who began his seventh term.

EIGHT United States marines were ambushed and killed by Nicaraguan bandits on New Year's day, and as a result the senate, on motion of Senator Johnson of California, called on the State department for a comprehensive report on the use of our marines in the Central American republic. Evidently the old question is to be debated again in congress. However, Secretary of State Stimson said the administration plans to keep the marines in Nicaragua at least until after the 1932 elections. This will be in accord with the wishes of the Nicaraguan government. President Jose Moncada stated he believed it would be unwise to withdraw the marines at this time; he added that he would like to insure additional co-operation of Nicaraguans with the United States force in an effort to stamp out banditry. His government, he said, is trying to obtain a loan of $1,000,000, part of which would be used to strengthen the national guard for this purpose.

M. W. Littleton

RESPONDING to a resolution of the senate asking for information on the subject, Secretary of Labor William N. Doak reported that approximately 400,000 aliens are now illegally residing in the United States, and that of this total, 25 per cent, or 100,000, are deportable under the provisions of the immigration act. In order to facilitate the federal program of deporting undesirable who are illegally residing in the country, several suggestions were made by Mr. Doak for changes in the present law, among them one for strengthening the law relative to the deportation of those aliens "who are affiliated with organizations which advocate the overthrow of the government of the United States."

That last phrase, of course, means chiefly the Communists, and it is interesting to note that a big anti-Communist mass meeting, presided over by Martin W. Littleton, was held in Carnegie hall, New York city, Friday, at which a resolution calling for the exclusion of those disturbers was adopted. Representatives of the leading civic, patriotic, labor and church organizations of America took part in the meeting, and Congressman Hamilton Fish told something of the findings of his congressional committee of investigation into the activities of the Reds.

BEST news of the week was that many thousands of men were being put back to work, especially by the railroads and the automobile manufacturers. The tension of the unemployment situation was appreciably lessened. The Chicago & Northwestern system returned nearly 7,000 employees to their jobs in the mechanical and car departments which had been closed since December 24. These departments were reopened on a three-day-a-week basis. The Monon line took back nearly 800 men on a part-time basis, and the Santa Fe and the Rock Island lines were preparing to give at least temporary jobs to hundreds. Other thousands, mainly shopmen, were returned to work by the Illinois Central, the Norfolk & Western, the Missouri Pacific, the New York Central and the Southern Pacific.

In Detroit and Cleveland the automobile factories were humming again. Twenty-two thousand men were recalled to the plants in the Detroit area Monday, and in the Ohio city not only the motor car makers but many other industries added to their pay rolls.

MORE trouble for the administration is brewing in the matter of immediate payment of the World war veterans' adjusted compensation certificates in cash. Representative Patman of Texas, sponsor of the bill for such payment, said it was likely the house would discharge the ways and means committee from further consideration of the measure so that action could be obtained. He asserted a petition for this course had been signed by members from many states who believe, with him, that unfair tactics have been employed to defeat the bill. Senator A. E. Vandenberg of Michigan, an administration supporter, was actively seeking to bring about some sort of compromise. He favors legislation to permit veterans to borrow up to 50 per cent of the ultimate value of their certificates. But this doesn't satisfy Patman. "Our nation," said the Texan, "is the wealthiest on earth. It owes less in proportion to wealth than any other country. It has given billions of dollars to other countries in recent years and much of it was used to pay their own veterans adjusted pay and bonuses up to $7,000 each."

"We can pay the veterans in cash now by selling bonds at the lowest interest rate in the history of our nation and retire the last one of those bonds in three or four years. By diverting payments from the public debt, which is already overpaid up to this time, no increase in taxes will be necessary now or later."

Ricardo Alfaro

It was over Florencio H. Arosemena had given up his office of president and was under arrest at the home of a cousin who was one of the revolutionists, the government was in the hands of a junta and Dr. Harmodio Arias was named acting president.

The office of president was at once offered by cable to Ricardo Alfaro, Panama's minister to the United States, asking him, if he accepted, to return at once from Washington. Alfaro took only four hours to decide and then accepted the call and began to wind up his affairs in the American capital. He is a veteran liberal and has been minister in Washington for nine years. It was believed by the revolutionists that his close relations with the American government would tend to hasten the recognition of the new regime by President Hoover.

For a day or two it seemed likely that Panama City would be attacked by a small army of armed farmers from the Chepo district where is the country seat of Vice President Tomas Duque, an adherent of Arosemena. But the provisional government placed machine guns on the highways leading into the city, and the counter revolution faded into nothingness.

Secretary of State Stimson conferred with President Hoover on the matter of recognition, and, while no statement was given out, the indications were that the Alfaro government would be recognized after some delay.

MODIFICATION of the so-called consent decree of 1920, ordered by Justice Jennings Bailey of the District of Columbia Supreme court, greatly loosens the restrictions imposed on the big packing companies. The Armour, Swift, Cudahy and Wilson concerns are now permitted to engage in the manufacture and sale of nearly all classes of food commodities. But they are not allowed to enter the retail field, Justice Bailey holding that retail activity by the packers "would probably result in almost complete annihilation of the independent retail grocers."

ONE day after flatly denying the report that he was about to resign, George Akeron, secretary to President Hoover, handed in his resignation—to the considerable relief of the Chief Executive's supporters. As his successor prominent Republican in Washington are urging Representative Franklin Fort of New Jersey.

Franklin Fort

Mr. Fort will leave public life on March 4. He was the unsuccessful primary candidate for the Republican nomination for the United States senate last spring, being defeated by Dwight W. Morrow. Members of congress say that Mr. Fort would give to the Hoover administration another contact with congress. He is well versed in politics and popular.

FRANCE laid the Lion of the Marne at rest with all possible honor, and the name of Joseph Joffre, marshal of the republic, is now added to those of the other famed leaders in the World war who have passed on. Clad in the black tunic and red breeches he wore in 1914, Joffre lay in state for two days in the chapel of the war college. On his breast was only one decoration, the Medaille Militaire which is granted only to army commanders and privates. Tuesday night the body was taken on a gun caisson, escorted by cavalry holding torches under the Arc de Triomphe to the Cathedral of Notre Dame. Wednesday morning in the cathedral the services were conducted by Cardinal Verdier, archbishop of Paris. The remains were then placed in a vault of the Chapel of the Invalides beside the biers of Napoleon, Foch and other national heroes. They will remain there for several weeks and will then be buried at the Joffre country home at Louveciennes, not far from Paris.

Consolidated Meets With Kiwanis Club

Santa Clara County Consolidated met with Campbell Kiwanis club today, with T. A. Cutting, president of the Chamber of Commerce, as temporary chairman, welcoming the organization.

President Wednell Thomas called the meeting to business. Minutes of the previous meeting were read by secretary Charles Roberts of Palo Alto.

Morris Eaton of Sunnyvale stated that already the town is crowded with men hoping to get work at the new dirigible base and no work in sight for some months to come. Word has been received from Congressman Free stating that he hopes to secure an appropriation from congress before March 4 to start the preliminary work at the airbase.

President Thomas appointed a ways and means committee to arrange for the financing of the base purchase. Arthur Curtner is chairman, assisted by Mr. Mendenhall of Palo Alto, C. C. Spaulding of Sunnyvale, W. P. Wright, Mountain View, Henry Hecker, Gilroy, and Mr. Edwards of San Jose. This committee has been called to meet at San Jose Chamber of Commerce rooms at 2 p. m. Monday.

Another equally important matter to this county is the "deep water port" which was discussed at the meeting. The committee appointed for this work is Jack Silvy, Charles Roberts, Guy Farley, T. A. Cutting, Leo Vishoot and Morris Eaton.

T. A. Cutting and H. C. Smith presented the subject of the Old Settlers day celebration, Feb. 23, which will take on a county-wide aspect this year. The plan is to have the afternoon program given over to the "old timer" delegates representing every community of the county, with interesting data of each.

Luther Cunningham, on behalf of the Saratoga delegation, invited the consolidated to meet with them the first Tuesday in February in preparation for the coming Blossom Festival. George Du Brut of San Jose will speak at that time on the "Industrial Possibilities of Santa Clara County."

ANNUAL CHURCH MEETING SHOWS 1930 A GOOD YEAR

The annual meeting of the Campbell Congregational church for the purpose of electing officers for the ensuing year was held last Wednesday evening in the church parlors and was presided over by Rev. J. H. Bennett.

It was revealed that 1930 was a record year. Total receipts were $4,396 and the year closed with a balance of $252. The outstanding features of the year were the work of the Womens Guild whose total monies raised amounted to $1,100, and the work of the young people's societies who gave to the church $240.

R. Y. Maxon was elected deacon in place of H. V. Archibald, who was selected chief usher in the place of Marshall Ross. Mrs. F. H. Cutting and Miss Hancie Naylor were elected deaconesses in place of Mrs. Maxon and Mrs. H. S. Young.

Stanley Smith and T. A. Cutting were elected Trustees, and W. H. Stray financial secretary. B. Smith replaced F. H. Cutting as Sunday school superintendent.

The other officers of the church remained as before, and the Sea Scouts were given the work of church janitors which will enable them to secure funds for their work.

A net increase of membership shows 12 additions to the roster which contains a total of 162 names. The program as outlined for 1931 shows great promise of further progress. Never in the history of the church has the work among the younger groups been so hopeful.

The church choir, under the able leadership of Mrs. Robert K. Sword is in fine shape and looking for additional members. Anyone desiring to sing with this group will be welcomed, Mr. Bennett said.

HISTORY'S MYSTERIES

Unsolved Riddles That Still Puzzle Authorities Here and Abroad

The Royal Riddle

ABOUT no other ruler have there ever been asked so many and such pointed questions as about Elizabeth, queen of England. Was she a man? Was she really the daughter of Henry VIII? Was she dark or fair? Was she a murderess? Was she really the "Virgin Queen" or was she a mother?

All these and scores of other queries have come up from time to time, and, owing to the paucity of authentic information from contemporary historians and the veil of reticence which appears to cloak even the frank narratives of the Elizabethan era, it is extremely difficult to answer any of them authoritatively. Even the matter of the parentage of the queen is still largely one of conjecture and her parentage appears to be open to more than a shadow of doubt. But when historians begin to comment upon the relations between the queen and certain of her courtiers they find themselves lost in a maze of contradictory statements, a veritable labyrinth of lies.

It has been affirmed with some degree of authenticity that a child was born to the queen by the earl of Essex at Kenilworth castle and a writer in the British "Notes and Queries" during the last century states: "It is a tradition in the family with which I am connected that Queen Elizabeth had a son who was sent to Ireland and placed under the care of the earl of Ormonde, a distant relative of 'Good Queen Bess.' Papers are said to exist in the family which prove this statement."

Another story has it that the child was the son of Robert Dudley, earl of Leicester, and that documents in the state paper office of the British government contain evidence of a conclusive nature about this and, on October 9, 1572, Sir Edward Dyer wrote to Sir Christopher Haller a letter which has been carefully hidden from the public but upon which a leading historian comments in the following words:

"It is not lightly, nor upon slight grounds, that the character of any woman should be suspected, much less when that woman was one of the most powerful monarchs that ever swayed the English scepter. Notwithstanding all the explanations of historians and the unauthenticated stories so commonly promulgated against Elizabeth, the writer's opinion was entirely against the justice of the accusations, but the letter in question has produced a conviction of a different nature. This important conclusion, if just, affords a key to many acts of Elizabeth's life which have hitherto been irreconcilable with the magnanimity which she sometimes displayed."

An entry in the manuscript of a free school of Shrewsbury tells of a certain son of the earl of Leicester and Queen Elizabeth and there is a tradition that this mysterious son was brought up secretly at the free school, but what became of him is not known nor is it easy to account for this curious entry in the parish church book.

"The Tourist's Illustrated Hand Book of Ireland" refers to the same matter by saying: "One of the interesting features pointed out in the burial ground of the parish chapel of Carrick-on-Suir is the grave of Thomas Butler, the natural son of her majesty, Queen Elizabeth, and Burke's Peerage gives an extract from the 'Dictionnaire de la Noblesse,' published in Paris in 1771, detailing the tradition that Thomas Butler, the tenth earl of Ormonde, and Queen Elizabeth were the parents of Piers Fitzthomas Butler, father of Sir Edward Butler, who was created Viscount Galmoye in 1646."

Bearing on this same phase of the affair, a writer of the time calls attention to the fact that the earl of Ormonde was high in favor of his royal mistress and that "he was a very comely and graceful personage and of a dark complexion which made the Irish give him the sobriquet of 'Duff' and gave occasion to her majesty's calling him her 'black husband.'"

On the other hand, there are quite as many and apparently as authentic statements to the effect that Elizabeth was entitled to be called the "Virgin Queen"—so that, in all justice, it must be admitted that the question of her maternity must at least be ranked among the mysteries which surrounded so many of the rulers of her time. The Still Waters

Don't be cruel to the poets. It is my experience that the worst poems come from the deepest feelings. Possibly that is because deep feelings make people attempt poetry who never have before; or because deep feelings leave no room for technique.

Whatever the reason, there is no use shooting the bad poets; some of them need sympathy, and the rest will believe that the trouble is not with their creations but with your judgment.—Edward Hope in the New York Herald Tribune.

Chimneys Not Very Old

We take our chimneys so much for granted that we do not realize how comparatively modern they are, in view of the great antiquity of man's civilization. It is almost incredible that he has enjoyed the benefits of the chimney for only a few hundred years.

Marathon Philosophy

Life is an endurance test, a clergyman says. Well, it keeps us up in the air a good deal, and has its own refueling problem.—Albany Knickerbocker Press.

CAMPBELL BEATS Y. M. I. SUNDAY

The Campbell baseball team won an easy victory over the Y. M. I. club of San Jose with a score of 15-1 on the local diamond Sunday.

This puts the Campbell team second in the lineup of the clubs; the Moose hold first place. Next Sunday at the Sodality park the local nine will play the Moose.

In the game Sunday Garret took the pitcher's box, with the regular hurler, Athenour, playing third sack. Garret struck out ten men and made the only home run of the game. A three-base hit was made by Lannotti and two-base hits by Lannotti and Orlando.

WATCH YOUR DOG
A number of dogs have been reported desperately ill from poison which they did not get in sufficient quantities to kill them. This morning a dog belonging to Mr. Tidwell of the Central garage died of what appeared to be strychnine poisoning. Watch your dog if you want to keep him alive.

These Men Need Help

If you ever go along Julian street in San Jose around noontime you will see a lot of hungry men getting something to eat at a window in the east side of a little restaurant near San Pedro street. This little lunchroom is operated by E. J. Schrenk, old time army sergeant with 26 years of service to his credit. The men you will see eating in the side yard have no money with which to buy anything—and the city is not supplying the food. Ex-sergeant Schrenk himself foots the bill. His savings have gone into the stomachs of these worthy unemployed—that's right, for most of them would be glad to work if there was any work to do. Anyway, the only thing that bothers Mr. Schrenk is the fear that he may not be able to keep up his good work.

He is getting some co-operation from San Jose merchants, who now and then deliver a sack of beans, flour, spuds, etc., to the little lunch room on Julian street.
No. bill accounts these deliveries.
The St. Claire hotel supplies an occasional welcome pot of beans and regular paying guests often shove their change into the "bean" box.

It may be that the city will eventually give Mr. Schrenk a hand with his big, hungry family. It seems to us that the Community Chest could do worse than to contribute something to this big-hearted chap in order that he may be allowed to do what he wants to do —feed his "boys." He is looking for no personal glory, but he rates A-1 with the homeless men who inhabit the "jungle" under the Julian street bridge.

Between 700 and 800 men are fed by Schrenk every day. Figure it out for yourself, and if you have any foodstuffs or a dollar or two that you can spare, drive by and let E-sergeant Schrenk see the size of your heart.

And if you have any men's wearing apparel with which you are willing to do without—every man has something he no longer wears —just take it to the edge of the Julian street bridge and toss it over the side. There are hundreds of under-clothed men down there who will be glad to take what you have to give. It gets cold at nights, and if you don't believe that, try sleeping out on the ground without even an overcoat.

The writer, accompanied by friends, visited the bridge Sunday evening. One lad came up to the car and received a warm overcoat.
It didn't fit too well, but he smiled and said " . . . but it will keep me warm nights." How would you like to have your own boy in those circumstances? Come on, folks, get big-hearted!

Welcomed End of Edict Against Highland Dress

A Highland exhibition, illustrative of olden times and life in the Highlands, held in Inverness, Scotland, attracted many hundreds of visitors. There was among the many "relics" of the '43 a rare copy of a Gaelic proclamation permitting the use of the Highland dress after it was banned. The proclamation was sent by Rev. R.
L. Ritchie, Crelich, Sutherland, and the Gaelic spelling is in parts phonetic. The English translation is as follows: "Listen, men! This is bringing before all the sons of the Gael that the king and parliament of Britain have for ever abolished the act against the Highland dress that came down to the clans from the beginning of the world to the year 1746. This must bring great joy to every Highlander heart.
You are no longer bound to the unmanly dress of the Lowlander.
This is declaring to every man, young and old, gentles and commons, that they may after this put on and wear the trows, the little kilt, the doublet, the small plaid, along with the tartan kilt, without fear of the law of the land or the jealousy of enemies."

Honor Well Bestowed on Chief Justice Taft

One day, along about midwinter, Joseph Tumulty, former secretary to President Woodrow Wilson, was taking his constitutional across the million-dollar bridge on Connecticut avenue when he saw a well-known and gigantic figure strolling ahead of him. Before Mr. Tumulty had a chance to quicken his own stride and catch up, as he usually did, a stranger in a small muddy auto bearing an Ohio license drew up beside the huge figure ahead.

"Say, guy! Could you tell me how to get to 700 California avenue?"

The large man stopped, smiled, went to the side of the muddy flivver and explained carefully and in detail how the stranger could reach the desired destination.

As he finished, the man from Ohio started his engine and called gratefully to the polite Washing-tonian:

"Thanks, Chief!" and drove away.

Little did the stranger know how nearly he had hit the truth when, in his impersonal gratitude, he had called the late Chief Justice William Howard Taft "Chief." Col-

Precocity, or Coaching?

There are in existence but the most meager threads of information concerning the youth of Francis Bacon. Up to his thirty-first year there is scarcely one fact of his life which is of importance to a biographer.

Upon one occasion Sir Nicholas is said to have taken Francis to court and presented him to the queen. Elizabeth fondled his hair, called him "my young lord keeper," and asked him his age. To this question the child answered, "Just two years younger than your majesty's happy reign." To some biographers this precocious reply has seemed a prophecy of Francis Bacon's later skill at flattering royalty; to others, however, it seems but a tribute to the coaching abilities of Sir Nicholas.—From "Sir Francis Bacon," by Byron Steel.

"Budget's" Original Meaning

The word "budget" can be traced back to the Latin word "bulga," but it is believed that this was itself an adaptation of a word from the Celtic language of old Gaul. It meant a "leather bag," and from it we have the old English "buge," a "bag," and "budget," a "little bag," which was in slang used to mean something like "a bag of tricks." In 1733 a pamphlet on Sir Robert Walpole's forthcoming excise bill was published entitled "The Budget Opened," the phrase being used as equivalent to "the cat out of the bag." Henceforth a chancellor of the exchequer making his statement of proposed taxes was said to "open his budget," and soon the word "budget" was used without focal intent of the statement itself.—Montreal

Originally Nautical Terms

"Westward Ho" and "Eastward Ho" were old nautical terms, fami-lar to inhabitants of London because of their frequent use by the boatmen on the Thames. In Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night" Olivia says: "There lies your way, due west." Viola replies: "Then westward ho! Grace and good disposition attend your ladyship." In 1005 Chapman, Marston, and Ben Jonson published a comedy entitled "Westward Hoe," and in 1882 James K. Paulding published a novel with the same title. "Westward Ho" or "The Voyages and Adventures of Sir Amvas Leigh in the Reign of Queen Elizabeth" was the title of a book published by Charles Kingley in 1852. The passage quoted from Shakespeare was probably written about 1601.—Ex-

"Push" Brings Success

Hustle is the real secret of a better job. And by hustle is meant preparation, diligence, industry, and trustworthiness. Too many men imagine that it's lack of pull that is holding them back, whereas in reality it is lack of push.—Grit.

Old Roman Temple

Workmen repairing the old Roman highway in Saarburg, near Trier, Germany, unearthed a Roman place of worship. Its walls, which are about 100 yards long, surround the remains of an altar. The finds included coins from the time of Emperor Constantine and shards of Roman pottery.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE BANQUET (Continued from Page 1)

Chamber of Commerce, spoke on the activities of the boys and girls of the community, pointing with pride to the new young folks' clubhouse and the splendid organizations of Campfire Girls, Boy Scouts and Cub Scouts which it houses. He spoke of the splendid work of Rev. J. H. Bennett, who fostered and kept alive the Scout movement in Campbell. Dr. Merrill also mentioned the Grattan brothers, Worthin and Gene, and the excellent work they are doing with the Campbell Sea Scouts, an organization recognized as one of the best of its kind in the United States. A rousing cheer greeted his suggestion that Congressman Arthur Free would make a fine senatorial candidate at the next election. Dr. Merrill was in Washington when the report of the Sunnyside air base committee was made, and said that the success of northern California in securing this project was due largely to the efforts of the fighting congressman.

W. R. Coupland spoke for the Odd Fellows; S. N. Hedegard assured the Chamber of Commerce the support of the Orchard City Grange. Mrs. Mark Purmort, president of the Country Woman's club, gave a history of that organization, referring to the library building as an accomplished goal.

Miss Anne Schulte amused the audience with a humorous reading.

The marked success of the affair was due to the efforts of the Chamber of Commerce committee which numbered among its members Mary Lanphear, S. N. Hedegard, A. J. Robins and Herbert M.
Shadle.
